The recent digital campaign proved highly effective, but high-level metrics mask a critical divergence: Campaign A acts as an acquisition engine for new buyers, while Campaign B functions as a retention driver for existing customers.

One Campaign Strategy Does Not Fit All Customer Segments

Campaign A (Acquisition Engine)

- Generates 63.77% of all New Customer revenue ($3,726.99 out of $5,844.43)

Campaign B (Retention Engine)

- Drives 75.69% of all Existing Customer revenue ($6,672.60 out of $8,815.17) and 61.09% of total conversion volume (146 out of 239)

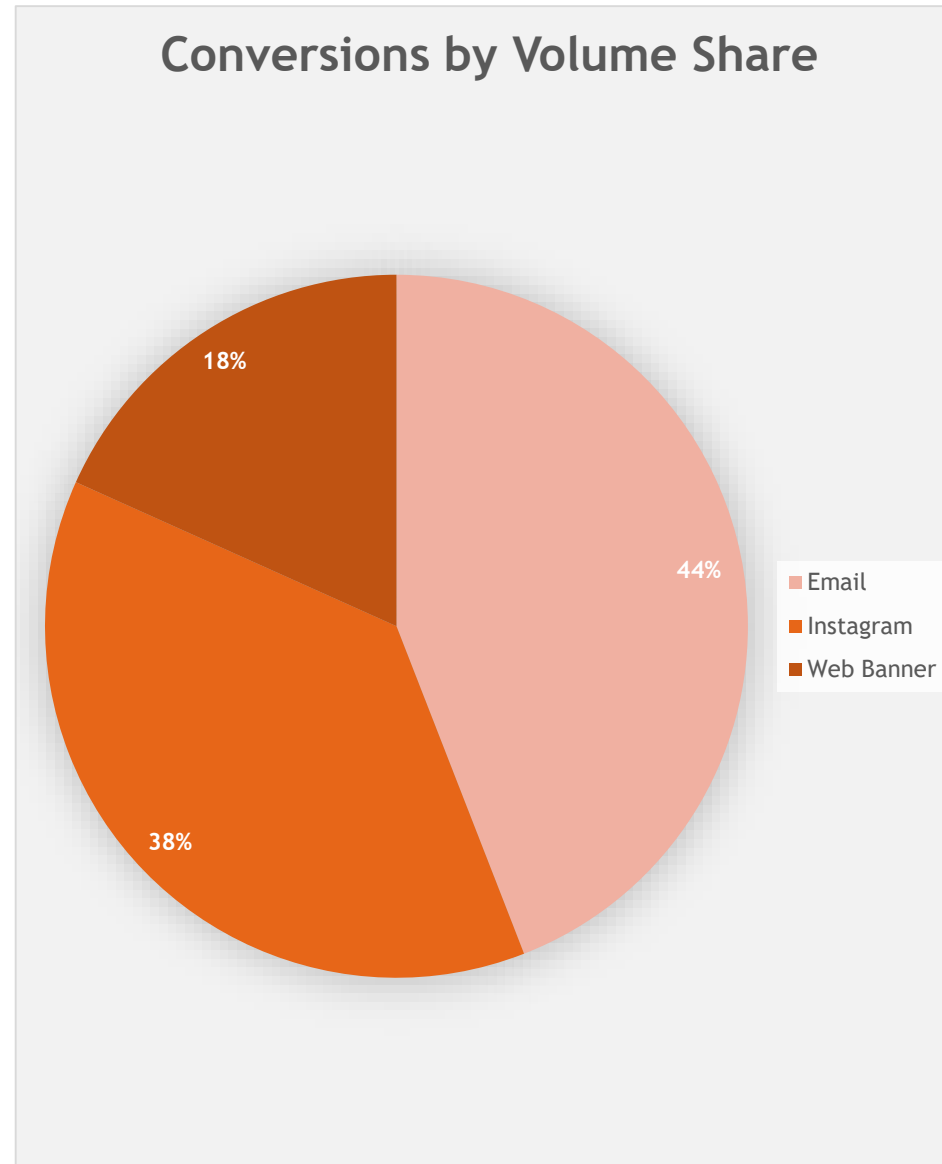

Email Leads Revenue Contribution, Followed by Instagram and Web banner

- Email is the foundational revenue anchor across both new and existing buyers.
- Instagram generates high top-of-funnel impact when paired with Campaign A messaging ($969.46 in new customer sales)
- Web Banners deliver low acquisition revenue ($633.06) but perform strongly for retargeting existing users ($1,803.67)

Email Delivers Highest Conversion Volume and Channel Efficiency

- Email converts traffic at the highest rate compared to social and banner channels.
- Instagram is the only channel where Campaign A generated more raw conversions than Campaign B (35 vs. 29), proving its value as an acquisition tool.

Where to Allocate Marketing Spend Next Quarter & Why

Segment-Specific Messaging

- Restrict Campaign A to cold prospect lists and Campaign B strictly to existing database contacts

Channel Budget Reallocation

- Scale Instagram: Focus budget on visual Campaign A creative to drive top-of-funnel new customer acquisition
- Optimize Web Banners: Pivot banner ad copy toward Campaign B promotional offers for retargeting

Automate Email Lifecycle Journeys

- Implement automated onboarding sequences for first-time buyers and loyalty offers for repeat buyers

Implementation Roadmap

- ▶ Set up audience suppression lists in ad managers to separate new vs. existing targets.
- ▶ Re-allocate Q4 budget: 45% to Acquisition (Campaign A / Instagram and Email) and 55% to Retention (Campaign B / Email & Banners).
- ▶ Establish bi-weekly dashboard tracking using the new dynamic console.
